RSS FEEDS

Law360 provides RSS feeds for all of its news content to any subscriber. These feeds provide a live stream of published news articles, and articles will appear in the RSS feed at the same time they appear on the Law360 website.

When a Law360 RSS feed is added to an RSS reader, newly published headlines and summaries will appear in the reader whenever the feed is refreshed. (Refresh frequency is set by the RSS reader, not Law360.)

The first step in setting up an RSS feed is figuring out what content you want to import a feed for.

RSS feeds can be broad or narrow. For example, you can set up a feed for all Law360 news, or for a very specific search. Most often, users set up feeds for individual sections.

To set up an RSS feed for all news headlines/summaries:

1. Go to www.law360.com.

2. Click on the red search button in the empty search box at the top of the page, which performs a search for all of our content.

3. Click at the right, above the news search results.

4. Copy the URL from the RSS page, and enter it into your RSS reader.

RSS Feeds for Custom News Searches

You can set up an RSS feed for any news search query as well. Instead of performing a blank search as described above, enter your specific query into the search box at the top of the website, then follow steps three and four above.

For more information on customized searches on the Law360 website, please see the Law360 Advanced Search Guide.

RSS Feeds for Custom Alerts (requires Platform subscription)

Platform subscribers can also set up RSS feeds for any custom alert when logged in with their username and password.

1. Set up a news or case alert by clicking the red button on a case search results page; a specific case page; an industry page; an organization's news, new cases or activity page; a PTAB or TTAB case or document page.

2. Name your alert, and click Save Alert.

3. Click next to the alert on your My Feeds and Alerts page, and copy the resulting RSS feed URL to your RSS reader.
