In a notice earlier this month, Google advised this Court that the district court had moved the date of jury selection forward from October 19 to October 1 but had invited the parties to identify any conflicts with the new date. After considering the parties' submissions and Google's motion for a continuance, the district court has now ordered that jury selection and trial will begin on November 2. The pretrial conference at which the district court is expected to address the parties' summary judgment motions, motions in limine, and other issues has been reset for October 19 and 21. The district court's order is attached.

Respectfully submitted,
